

COLUMBIA JOURNALISM REVIEW

SUMMER 1970

Jean Schwoebel · Edwin Diamond

Did the 'Post' have to die? Robert Sherrard

Max Frankel on 'scoopery' · John Lear on science writing

TV news: how influential?

COLUMBIA JOURNALISM REVIEW

Summer, 1970

Columbia Journalism Review is published quarterly under auspices of the faculty, alumni, and friends of the Graduate School of Journalism, Columbia University.

Dean and editorial chairman: Elie Abel.

Visiting Editor: Alfred Balk.

Editor (on leave): James Boylan.

Art director: Burton Wenk. Circulation manager: Sylvia Orr. Circulation consultant: S. O. Shapiro. Subscription assistant: Liliane Zaretsky. Production assistant: Joy Allen.

Board of advisory editors: Edward W. Barrett (chairman), Richard T. Baker, W. Phillips Davison, Fred W. Friendly, Luther P. Jackson, Penn T. Kimball, John Luter, Melvin Mencher, John M. Patterson, Louis M. Starr, Leonard Wallace Robinson, Frederick T.C. Yu.

Chairman, publishing committee: Louis G. Cowan.

Volume IX, Number 2, Summer, 1970. Published four times a year by Graduate School of Journalism, New York, N. Y. Editorial and business offices: 700 Journalism Building, Columbia University, New York, N. Y. 10027. © 1970 Graduate School of Journalism, Columbia University. Printed by Vermont Printing Co., Brattleboro, Vt. 05301.

Subscription rates: $6.00 a year. Single copy: $1.75. Add 50c a year for subscriptions going outside the United States and United States possessions.

Second-class postage paid at New York, N. Y., and Brattleboro, Vt.

Articles

- 8 The coming newsroom revolution: 1. The miracle "Le Monde" wrought.
Jean Schwoebel
- 12 Newsroom revolution: 2. "Reporter power" takes root.
Edwin Diamond
- 19 How influential is TV news?
International Broadcast Institute panel
- 30 The trouble with science writing.
John Lear
- 35 The white captivity of black radio.
Fred Ferretti
- 40 Did the "Post" have to die?
An essay review. Robert Sherrod

Departments

- 2 Passing comment: views of the editors
 - 48 Books
 - 51 Notes on the art: Max Frankel; Stuart Auerbach; Jules Witcover; Edwin N. Williams
 - 59 Unfinished business
 - 64 Report on reports
- the lower case (inside back cover)